EXETER POSTMASTER.

UNDER ARREST.

Charged With Using Profane and Indecent Language.

Editor Herriek The Complainant—A Fair Makes A Sensation.

Quite a sensation was caused in Exeter on Friday afternoon when Captain George N. Julian, postmaster, was placed under arrest by Superintendent of Police Charles G. Gooch, on complaint of Israel A. Herriek, charging the postmaster with using profane and indecent language towards him.

The news of the arrest immediately became known throughout the town, and at 3 o'clock, the hour set for the hearing before Judge H. A. Shute in the police court, a crowd, which filled the court room to overflowing, had gathered to attend the trial. The case was continued until Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, however, to allow the gathering of further evidence. Captain Julian was defended by John O'Neil and Mr. Herriek prosecuted his own case.

The history of the trouble appears about as follows: Mr. Herriek, about a month ago, came to Exeter and purchased The Gazette. That morning he found in his mail a letter addressed to that paper from a correspondent in a nearby town. The letter was mailed on June 21 and was received in Exeter upon the same date, as was shown by the post mark upon the envelope. He also received, Friday, a letter from Haverhill, Mass., which reached Exeter several days ago. He at once went to the postmaster and entered a complaint concerning the tardy arrival of both these missives.

It is alleged that Captain Julian then waxed angry, and in the heat of his passion addressed to Mr. Herriek several profane epithets and threatened to do him harm. He also, it is said, gave orders to his clerks in the future to put no more mail in Mr. Herriek's box, but to throw it upon the floor. Mr. Herriek wished to lease another box for the coming quarter, but was denied this privilege.

The affair has caused a great amount of comment about town. There has been much complaint concerning the running of the office, and it is certain that an inspector will at once pay Exeter a visit.

Mr. Herriek says, concerning the matter:

"Mr. Julian is a man with whom I have no personal quarrel. He simply does not know what duties he owes the public as their paid servant. I came to Exeter to make a home and to carry on a business in a quiet way. I deplore this matter, but felt that it was my duty to protect myself against public assaults, particularly when these were unprovoked and inexcusable. As a newspaper publisher, I cannot pass by the open, gross profanity of an officer of the Government on duty in business hours, before the clerks of the office, the citizens and his own daughter. In refusing to put my mail in The Gazette box, he simply misunderstands his official duties. As to the alleged assault, that matter is in the hands of a court of record, whose decision we await. I shall call the attention of the Postoffice department to the circumstances at once and ask that an inspector be sent here authorized to investigate the charges against Mr. Julian for breach of duties as postmaster."

The cavalry began to get ready for its long journey early, and was the first organization to leave the ground, starting for Peterborough long before noon.

Breaking camp is a pretty sight as each order is executed by the bugle call and the tents all fall together.

Many visitors stayed late at the camp in the evening and all had a most enjoyable time, as the bands provided excellent music at the regimental headquarters.

WILL SOMEBODY EXPLAIN?

Is "Old Home Week" to be Confined to Concord?

As the agitation for "Old Home" week increases, the suspicion grows that the idea is being used by Concord as an advertising scheme for herself. It looks like "Concord first and the moss covered bucket, little red schoolhouse and old homestead afterwards."

What does Concord want of an auditorium? Subscriptions are coming in for one. An auditorium in Concord, the sleeping city of the state, would be about as fitting as a brass band in the middle of the Sahara desert.

If all the other towns and cities of New Hampshire should pour their people into Concord during "Old Home" week, then an auditorium might be of use for mass meetings and other gatherings. But this is out of the question.

The sons and daughters of New Hampshire who come back to their old homes in August won't all journey to Concord. They will seek Portsmouth, Nashua, Manchester, Berlin, Lancaster, yes, Hooksett and Gilsum and Colebrook, and the other places where their home affections lie. It will be a home-coming to the whole state—not a pilgrimage to Concord and a pitching of tents there.

Concord will get her share of visitors, but the thousands and tens of thousands will be scattered all over the state. The rose bushes by the weather beaten door of the old home will appeal to more strongly than an auditorium in a Concord field. Most of them would rather stroll down the lane and across the brook of the old home than hang around Concord with nothing more to look at than Hosea Ballou Carter, "Chuck" French and the band box cars that jog to Penacook.

Many hundreds of these New Hampshire children will undoubtedly find more pleasure in picturesque old Portsmouth, with her beautiful ocean outlooks, than in drinking red lemonade in Concord and in hearing her orators prate of her wondrous bargain sales.

"Old Home" week is a fine idea, and Governor Rollins should be praised for having originated it. It will be a success, too. But it should not be made into a peasant and popular fair for one city alone. Let it rather be a reunion of New Hampshire's great family, with the hills and valleys from Coos to Kye as the stage.

Better turn that auditorium, Concord, into a first class opera house that can be used all year round.

BRIGADE BREAKS CAMP.

New Hampshire Soldiers Return Home From Concord.

General Tolles' brigade struck camp at 1 o'clock Friday, after one of the most successful encampments in the history of the state troops. Early in the morning preparations for leaving were in evidence and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon all companies had taken their departure and the grounds had been vacated for another year.

During the morning the companies were given a lively skirmish drill on the grounds, and to visitors it was a somewhat rare and intensely interesting sight.

The cavalry began to get ready for its long journey early, and was the first organization to leave the ground, starting for Peterborough long before noon.

Breaking camp is a pretty sight as each order is executed by the bugle call and the tents all fall together.

Many visitors stayed late at the camp in the evening and all had a most enjoyable time, as the bands provided excellent music at the regimental headquarters.

EXPECTING A CROWD.

The weather indications are fair tomorrow, and warm. With these conditions, the breezy stretches of the York beaches will be eagerly sought by thousands, and the P. K. & Y. road will be called upon to handle a record-breaking crowd. The half-hour schedule which went into effect today will simplify the proposition.

THE INTERVIEWER.

"Are the styles in high-heeled shoes making a generation of weak or strong-ankled persons?" asked a man the other day. "Nine out of every ten of the women seen upon the street in old shoes will display a shoe that is run over to one side or another at the heel, in an amazing manner. Would their ankles be so badly off if they should wear a low heel?"

"It's about time that Portsmouth got together on this 'Old Home' week idea," remarked an old citizen. "Public meetings in furtherance of the plan are being held in other towns and we ought to fall into line. Although the date for the occasion is a couple of months ahead, yet there is none too much time for arranging things."

"And after it is all over, and the alumni and the friends are gone home," said the young man who has just completed his college course, "there comes the most lonely and forlorn period that the new graduate has ever known in his life. If the breaking up of his old room and the packing of his pictures, books, trophies and various belongings, doesn't bring a sob into his throat and make his eyes feel misty, then he is a very unusual sort of a college man. It is a heart-wrenching time, with its farewell to old chums and its departure from the dear old campus. Then in most cases there is a dismal uncertainty about the future, the bitter realization that all the golden opportunities have not been properly improved, and the certain knowledge that never again on earth will the skies be as blue and their clouds as few as during the happy, care free undergraduate days."

People that patronize restaurants are nearly all cranks," said the waiter. "I have worked in scores of restaurants in my time and I have learned to take these people philosophically. A waiter can't stay in the business and not do it. I have worked in restaurants where a customer would ask me with a good deal of sarcasm why I did not give him a smaller napkin and a bigger piece of pie. As against such as this I have had customers that have asked me why I did not serve a bigger napkin and a smaller piece of pie. So there you are. Life is too short and business goes off with too much of a rush in a modern restaurant for waiters to become experts at mind reading so as to know just how to serve a customer in order that there may be no chance for a kick. Then there are patrons of restaurants that kick on bakers' bread, while the majority of restaurant patrons will eat no other. I am tired of trying to please everybody and I wish the millennium would come, if it is coming."

RIDING ON SIDEWALK.

There is evidently some difference of opinion relative to the provisions of the state bicycle law as regards riding on sidewalks. The purpose of the framers of the bill was to prohibit sidewalk riding, except that children under 12 years are exempt from such prohibition, and that every wheel should be provided with a suitable alarm bell. The first section of the act is as follows:

"Whoever, without the permit provided for in section 3 of this act, rides a bicycle or a tricycle on a sidewalk, or rides such machine in the streets, squares or parks of any city or town when the same is not provided with a suitable alarm bell, adapted for use by the rider, or who rides the same in the compact part of any city or town at a rate of speed exceeding ten miles an hour, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $10, and shall be further liable for all damages occasioned to any person by such unlawful act. The provisions of this section, however, shall not be construed to apply to children under the age of 12 years."

RETURN OF COMPANY A.

Company A returned from Concord on Friday evening, where they had been since Monday in camp with other companies of the State National Guard, and was given a cordial reception by the large crowd of people at the station. The Kearsarge Flute and Drum band was on hand for escort duty, and the company marched through the principal streets of the city before going to the armory. The men made an excellent appearance, were brown as berries and marched with the precision of veterans. Evidently the time in camp had been devoted to drill and the men had devoted their attention strictly to the duties of soldier life, otherwise Captain White, in the brief time he has had his men together, could not have attained such good results as were apparent on Friday evening. The company is one that our citizens may well feel a just pride in.

THE NEW HOTEL WEIRS.

The White mountain travel, so-called, when the denizens of the city seek the cooling breezes and pure air of the superior altitudes of the hills of New Hampshire has commenced, but not sufficiently to embarrass the baggage and train men of the city. A little later, when the tide of travel sets up across Lake Winnepesaukee, The Weirs becomes an attractive, busy, but exceedingly cool and pleasant place. Those who contemplate passing the summer in a restful manner, and desire a diversity of attractions within easy reach, will find an ideal place in the New Hotel Weirs on the Lake Winnepesaukee at Weirs, N. H.

THE ANIMAL HE DIDN'T CATCH.

On Friday night, while Chief Officer Tillock, Engineer Steelman and David S. Kindell of the steamer Lancaster, were inhaling the rejuvenating ozone while cycling on the Greenland road, a small animal suddenly darted out of the bushes and ran ahead of them. The cyclers gave chase, each exclaiming what he imagined the animal to be: "A squirrel!" "A rabbit!" "A cat!" etc.; and gaining on the animal the engineer exclaimed: "A coon cat!"

Kindell, last summer, secured a coon cat while in Bangor, Me., and with visions of a prize coon cat floating in the "salt's" head he spurred, and when nearly upon the mysterious animal leaped from his wheel and grabbed at his prize. The "what is it" ran across the road and upon a stone wall where it stopped. Kindell was a close second and being uninitiated naturally imagined it was fatigued, whereas it merely paused to take a more deliberate aim; for, as the son of Neptune grabbed at his coveted prize, the cute little animal threw a quantity of its chief weapon of defence, hitting the mariner full in the face.

Clasping his eyes, with a cry of pain, the unfortunate cyclist exclaimed: "Oh! My eyes! My eyes! I can't see!" His nautical contemporaries looked on amazed and worried. After rubbing his eyes he informed his bewildered companions that the pert little animal was a skunk.

The cyclers resumed their journey "homeward bound," sadder but wiser. These natives of the Quaker City (Phila.) had often heard of skunks, but now have had a personal acquaintance with them and they declare they will hereafter give all animals resembling felines a "wide berth."

While en route to the city the unfortunate cyclist was hailed by passing wheelmen with: "Get off the pike!" "Throw it away!" "Go hide yourself!" "Bury your clothes!" etc. The three cyclers called at the Herald office and vigorously protested against the hard treatment they had received.

BIG MINE EXPLOSION.

100 Miners Entombed at Ashley, Pennsylvania.

ALL THE MEN GOT OUT ALIVE

The Men Escaped in the Burning Mine Escape Suction by Lying Flat on Their Faces—Relatives of the Workmen Gather Around the Mouth of the Shaft.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 23.—An explosion of gas in the Maxwell shaft of the Lehigh & Wilkesbarre Coal Company at Ashley set fire to the mine and caused a fall of coal which for a time imprisoned about 100 miners.

All of the men in pit were got out safe. The only cases of serious injury were Michael Sweeney and Roger Harrison, miners, who were severely burned. Alarming reports that had been spread about food after the explosion brought hundreds of persons to the mouth of the shaft. Among them were many relatives of the men working within. The fall of coal, which was thought at first to be heavy enough to make the fate of the men beyond question, was removed by heroic efforts on the part of willing volunteers and the colliery stopped work when the men were reached. The cause of the explosion has not yet been ascertained.

It was probably an accumulation of gas in an unexpected place, for the ventilation fans had not stopped. General Manager Richards, Superintendent Morgan L. Morgan and other officers spent several hours at the mine and after the first great danger was over they held a consultation as to the inside fire caused by the explosion.

Just how serious this fire is cannot now be learned, and the managers of the mine are not satisfied as to whether it is beyond control.

The Maxwell is one of the largest works in the coal region. The breaker can prepare 3,000 tons daily. There are about 1,000 men employed inside and nearly as many in the breaker and the outside workings.

The explosion was on the sixth lift of the red ash vein, which is 600 feet below the surface. The fall of coal came in such a way that the passage through was not entirely choked.

A few hundred tons more, or a smaller gangway would have made all the difference between no loss of life and a frightful disaster. The greatest danger of all at first was from the after-damp, but the men escaped by lying down flat on their faces and the fans were kept working.

Bank Thief Gets $10,000.

Boston, June 23.—A sneak thief entered the Metropolitan National Bank here and stole $10,000 while the paying teller's attention was drawn away for a moment.

The man entered the bank and at the teller's window asked directions about sending a money order. The teller gave him the information desired and the stranger stood at the counter apparently making notes.

Just then the teller was called to another part of the office, and the visitor quickly thrust his arm through the grating of the window and took fifty $100 notes and five $1,000 notes.

The thief, Philip Lambelle, who is one of the cleverest at his line of business in the country, was arrested in New York as he got off the train from Boston at the Grand Central Depot. The whole ten thousand dollars were found in his possession and will be turned over to the bank.

Carnegie Company Bars Union Men.

Homestead, Pa., June 23.—There is a cloud on the labor horizon here, caused by the action of Superintendent Corry, of the Carnegie Steel Works, in discharging some thirty workmen who are prominent in the True Blue Club, ostensibly a social organization. Since the big strike of 1892 the Carnegie Company has refused to recognize the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. It is said that the True Blues are secretly affiliated with the union. They number 500 or more. It is not known what steps they will take.

Drought Destroying Ranches.

Denver, June 23.—According to reports received by Secretary Martin of the National Live Stock Association, continued drought has almost destroyed all the large Colorado ranches. Hundreds of cattle and sheep are reported dying in the San Luis valley. Northern New Mexico, parts of Oklahoma, the Indian Nations, western Kansas, and southern Utah also report the ranches almost bare and it is feared that the loss of cattle will be heavy.

Greensburg, Ky., June 23.—Mrs. Julia A. Ware, widow of Ed Ware, who was killed by Tame Davenport, cannot secure her four children. When Ware drove his wife away from home, he moved his sister and her husband there and gave the children into their possession. They refuse to vacate the property or give up the children and the mother is compelled to go to law to get possession of her house and her children.

Negroes Try to Lynch a White.

Columbia, S. C., June 23.—News arrives from Conway, Horry County, that negroes attempted to lynch a white youth named Sam Davis, who had killed a negro named Green. The negro ran into Davis with a bicycle, and the killing resulted. Davis's father drove away the lynching party with a shotgun.

A Fish Hook Causes Death.

Bellefontaine, Ohio, June 23.—Robert D. Varvel, while fishing, ran a fish hook through his thumb and died in great agony of blood poisoning.

BOY DRIVEN TO DEATH

George Rahe Hangs Himself Because He Can't Be a War Hero.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 23.—Dime novels with colored covers depicting blood-curdling scenes were responsible for the suicide of a fifteen-year-old boy named George Rahe, whose lifeless body was found hanging in the cellar of his employer's grocery store at No. 1,908 Cumberland street.

The body was cut down by a policeman and taken to Rahe's parents' home, No. 4,555 Alder street.

The boy spent all his leisure time in reading the trashy stuff. Among it was a story about a sixteen-year-old boy in command of a battleship that destroyed a Spanish fleet of twenty armored cruisers. After the battle the hero headed a party of marines on a shore expedition and defeated a Spanish army, himself killing nearly half of them.

That story turned the boy's head, and for weeks he had done little else than talk of his hero. About a week ago he became melancholy and announced that he would either be the captain of a man of war or a general after the order of the boy skipper, or nothing. He added that the war having ended there was little chance for him in this world.

Rio Grand on Rampage.

Austin, Tex., June 23.—The Rio Grande River is on the greatest rampage known for forty years. The old river site of Carrizo, county seat of Zapata county, was washed away by the flood of that river. Not a vestige of the settlement which once had a population of about 1,200 Mexicans remains.

The present big flood has caused the river to change its course at several places, transferring thousands of acres of Mexican territory to the United States. The International Water Boundary Commission will be called upon to define the disputed boundary when the flood subsides. At one place on the river bordering on Hidalgo county the river is cutting off a large tract of United States territory. This land is apart of Jose Benavide's ranch and there are several hundred head of cattle there.

It was near that place that the river, when on a rise a few years ago, transferred a part of a Mexican ranch stocked with several thousand sheep to the Texas side of the stream. The United States officials made an effort to collect a duty on the sheep, but the ranch owner successfully resisted payment of same. The effect of the present flood has not yet reached Brownsville, where Fort Brown is located.

Packing House Men Out.

Chicago, June 23.—Nearly 500 men in four packing houses at the stock yards left their work. They inaugurated a strike which the leaders say will spread, and by July 1, the day chosen for a demonstration, involve the most of the houses in the yards. Special policemen are on the ground watching closely the actions of strikers. The trouble began when 200 meat market men and truck haulers in the employ of Nelson Morris & Co. went out to secure an advance in wages of 25 cents a day.

Verdict of Lynching.

Seranton, Miss., June 23.—"We, the jury, find that deceased came to his death by climbing a tree, venturing too far out on a limb and broke his neck." That was the verdict of the coroner's jury in the case of Daniel Patrick, colored, who was lynched here. Patrick confessed his crime and begged the men and truck haulers to burn at the stake and was glad to be let off with a rope and bullets. Three hundred of the most prominent men in the city participated in the lynching.

Cemetery Superintendent Shot.

Calro, Ill., June 23.—A telephone message received from Mound City reported the killing of Major T. A. Fitzpatrick, Superintendent of the National Cemetery, near that place by a man named John. The men quarreled and Tobin pulled a pistol and shot Major Fitzpatrick. Tobin surrendered himself.

A Yarn Combination.

Boston, June 23.—A combination of nine yarn mills of New Bedford, Fall River and Taunton, to go into effect early in July, will be on a capitalization basis of $15,700,000. There will be issued $5,700,000 5 per cent. gold bonds, $5,000,000 7 per cent. preferred common stock and $5,000,000 common stock.

Wages Advanced.

Manch Chunk, Pa., June 23.—The 200 furnace men and laborers employed at the Carbon Iron and Steel Company's plant at Paryville have been notified that, beginning July 1, their wages will be increased 10 cents per day. This is the second advance in wages since the plant resumed operations ten weeks ago.

Disliked "Dutch."

Kutztown, Pa., June 23.—Because he objected to the use of "Pennsylvania Dutch" by scholars, and because he would not permit visitors at the Keystone Normal School to be entertained with liquor, Dr. Mancher is defeated for principal of the school. He had held the position six years.

Waldvogel's Slayer Caught.

New York, June 23.—After eluding the police for two days, Philip McDermott of 212 East Twentieth street, who on Monday night stabbed George Waldvogel, who died from the wound in Bellevue Hospital on Tuesday morning, was captured in the house at 461 Eleventh avenue.

A BOON TO MOTHERS.

If Any Portsmouth Mother Has Looked For This, Follow This Citizen's Advice.

Wherever we go and among all classes we find children suffering from weak kidneys. The intelligent mother knows that this is not a habit and searches for a remedy. It is something very hard to relieve and the family physician tells her that the child will grow out of it in time. Sometimes they do and sometimes they do not. In the meantime, annoyance and embarrassment is the result. If anyone knows a remedy is it not an act of charity, is it not a duty to make it public? Should selfishness or pride keep it concealed? Mrs. A. G. Mace of 13 Madison street has used Doan's Kidney Pills in her family and makes the following statement for the benefit of anxious parents and the relief of interesting little children.

"My little girl had weak kidneys. I believe she inherited the complaint. Her trouble was non-retention of the kidney secretions. I employed physicians and used many remedies advertised but until I obtained Doan's Kidney Pills for her at Philbrick's pharmacy nothing did her any good. They helped her so much and gave such relief to the child that I am very grateful for having my attention drawn to the pills. I can really recommend Doan's Kidney Pills for weak kidneys in children and you are welcome to refer to me regarding them."

NEW FRENCH CABINET.

Senator Waldeck-Rousseau Succeeds in Second Attempt.

Paris, June 23.—Senator Waldeck-Rousseau has completed the formation of a Cabinet.

Senator Waldeck-Rousseau was summoned to the Elysee, and President Loubet requested that he make another attempt to organize a Ministry.

The new Cabinet is as follows: Senator Waldeck-Rousseau, President of the Council of Ministers and Minister of the Interior; M. Delcasse, Minister of Foreign Affairs; General the Marquis de Gallifet, Minister of War; M. de Lanesau, Minister of Marine; M. Monis, Minister of Justice; M. Calvay, Minister of Finance; M. Leger, Minister of Commerce; M. Leger, Minister of Public Instruction; M. Decrais, Minister of the Colonies; M. Jean Dupuy, Minister of Agriculture; M. Pierre Baudin, Minister of Public Works.

Mrs. Baker's Eleventh Son.

Manchester, Ky., June 23.—Mrs. Emma Baker, widow of Tom Baker, gave birth on Tuesday to a fine boy, her eleventh son. One child is a girl. She has named the boy after his father. The situation in Manchester is unchanged. The Whites and the Howards go armed, and seem to be on the watch for the Bakers, who are still in Laurel county.

Frankfort, Ky., June 23.—Gov. Bradley will call a special session of the Legislature within the next two weeks to meet in July, to pass laws giving power in cases of feuds to special judges to summon jurors from remote counties. It is urged that under the present laws a fair trial could not be had in the Baker-White feud, as citizens of Clay county are members of feudal factions, and a jury could not be drawn to find an indictment.

Cubans Love General Lee.

Norfolk, Va., June 23.—Senator Manuel F. Martinez, a Cuban, in Norfolk on business, by invitation spoke at the Board of Trade room. He said the intelligent Cubans desire annexation want stanch support for Cuba, freedom of religion and American immigration. The first thing they want, he said, is that Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, who understands them and whom they love, shall be appointed Governor of Cuba. He said he had special cause to love Gen. Lee. When confined by Gen. Weyler in the fortress of Cabanas and hourly expecting death, Gen. Lee visited him.

CAPTURED MUSICANS

HAD NO MEANS OF RESISTANCE

The Departure of Volunteers Looked Upon By the Natives as an Evidence of Abandoning War.

From This Quarter They Gather New Hope—Arguelles, Who Favored Partial Autonomy, Sent to Prison—More Serious Fighting Expected in Cavite.

Manila, June 23.—The outposts of the Washington Regiment have captured General Pio del Pilar's brass band of eighty-two pieces.

The members of the band somehow became separated from the rest of the army and came near the American lines without having the means of resistance. Some Chinamen of Manila have filed a claim against the Filipinos, who, it appears, beased the musicians from them and turned them over to General Pio del Pilar.

Four of the wounded of the Fourth regiment's recent night with natives have died in hospital.

The Filipinos have learned that the American volunteers are returning to the United States, and the Filipino newspapers show they construe this to mean that the Americans are abandoning the war and are discouraged thereby.

Details of the sentencing of Colonel Arguelles, a Filipino commissioner, to twelve years' imprisonment have just been obtained here. It was at first reported that his condemnation by the Filipinos was due to the friendship he displayed towards Americans, but the information just obtained shows the accusation against him was not based on his peace conferences at Manila, as supposed.

The charge against the Colonel was that in conversation with Filipino officers he predicted that disorders within the native territory would lead to civil war and, therefore, he said he considered autonomy under the American preferable to independence.

Washington, June 23.—War Department officers are expecting to receive soon news of another encounter between Gen. Wheaton's forces at Imus and the enemy of the Cavite district.

It is apparent that the natives are not so thoroughly disorganized as at first appeared. When Gen. Wheaton captured Imus they retreated about seven miles southward to Perez Dasmariñas. They were not permitted to remain there long, and when compelled to retreat they abandoned the main road and fled to Buena Vista to the westward. To do this they were forced to cross three rivers and travel through rice swamps for nearly three miles.

The latest information from Manila is to the effect that the insurgents are concentrating at San Francisco de Malabon. Army officers at the War Department, who are following their movements, say that if the enemy are at Malabon they are very near the American troops. Malabon is directly west of about four miles from Imus, so that the insurgents, after leaving Buena Vista, returned northward and drew nearer to Gen. Wheaton's forces. Instead of retreating further to southern part of the province.

There are no roads leading from Imus to San Francisco de Malabon. The country is broken by three rivers, and there is much marsh land which makes it almost impossible for artillery to do much effective work. It is probable, though, that a force of American troops may be sent against the natives to prevent their regaining the country north of Imus.

Gen. Otis informed the War Department by cable that the hospital ship Relief left Manila for San Francisco with 250 sick soldiers on board.

May Enlist 10,000 Men.

Washington, June 23.—Preparations are being made by the War Department which indicate that the Government intends to muster in 10,000 volunteers. It cannot be ascertained definitely whether a call for that number of additional men has been decided on or not, but the best information obtainable makes it appear that such a determination has been reached and that the Department's preparations have been undertaken so there will be no delay should the number of men mentioned be called for. The activity of the Department in the matter, however, is reasonable ground for the belief that the question of securing 10,000 volunteers is under consideration, and that there would be a conference on the subject when President McKinley returns to Washington.

War Department officers are very reticent on the subject. They declare, however, that no order for the mustering in of volunteers has been issued, and that nothing on the subject of additional troops for the Philippines has been heard from Gen. Otis since his despatch saying, in response to an inquiry from the War Department that he could secure enough men from among the State troops under his command to organize three skeleton regiments of volunteers.

Miles Not for Philippines.

Adams, Mass., June 23.—An official in the relations with the Department says that the latter has no present intention of sending either General Miles or General Wood to the Philippines in the near future.

This announcement is made in response to inquiries prompted by the known fact that General Miles is eager to go to the Philippines with a force adequate to the speedy suppression of the native uprising.

A WELCOME FOR DEWEY.

He Receives Cheers and Presents and Makes a Speech.

Columbo, Ceylon, June 23.—An aide-de-camp representing the Governor of Ceylon, the Right Hon. Sir West Ridgway, boarded the Olympia in order to welcome Admiral Dewey, and Col. Savage, commanding the troops also called. The visits were returned by Admiral Dewey and he was received at the port by a grand old house, and, amidst cheering, drove away in the Governor's carriage.

The Admiral afterwards looked rooms at the Galleface Hotel and returned on board the Olympia. There he received a deputation representing the Planters' Association and the Chamber of Commerce, and was presented with a silver basket and an address as a memento of his visit.

The Admiral will remain at Ceylon about a week. He says he had a good voyage from Singapore and that his health is fairly good.

The presentation of the basket to Admiral Dewey was made on board the Olympia instead of in the Council Chamber, because the doctor had forbidden him to participate in any official function.

The delegates also presented a thousand pounds of tea to the crew of the Olympia.

The Admiral, replying to the address of welcome, said he desired incidentally mentioning that he was a lifelong tea drinker himself, and assuring the delegation that the address would be read at "muster" and afterwards framed and preserved. The basket, he remarked, he would always keep on his table, and he told the delegation that he would report the matter to his Government and describe the cordiality of his reception.

Texas Mob Law Invalid.

Dallas, Tex., June 23.—The State Court of Criminal Appeals has declared the "Mob law" unconstitutional. Attorney-General Smith wrote a letter to Assistant Attorney-General Morris, who is at Athens, advising him of the court's action and instructing him in the Humphrey franchise examining trials next Monday to prosecute under the statutes for murder in the first degree, and not under the Mob law statute. The Court of Criminal Appeals holds that the Mob law statute is inoperative and void because not capable of construction.

OTHER PAPERS' COMMENTS.

There never was a meaner piece of clutter than this about the delinquency, or inefficiency or mismanagement or cowardice, as some cheap gossips call it, of Admiral Schley at Santiago. Schley was in command, everything was done under his orders and the victory, the biggest and best of the whole war, was won. Who cares what he said in hearing of Hodgson or anybody else? He got there, and the Spanish fleet was swept out of existence. All the rest of it is of no more account than the chatter of idiots. Schley is a fighter and a mighty good man, and whether he is a democrat or a republican is of no more consequence in this matter than the question of who was Jack O'Spades' great grandmother, although some folks appear to think it of infinite importance, which only goes to show the littleness of their own souls.—Dover Democrat.

This is right good stuff, far better than all the slams that the spiteful New York Sun has given Schley. Brother Foster is once more showing his old-time spirit of clear, sharp English which has lain dormant in him for some time.

The lake cars were crowded last evening and Massabesic is gaining in favor as a resort since the lawless element has been suppressed.—Manchester Union.

And the credit for it is due to the energetic high sheriff whose mail comes to Portsmouth.

Boatblack Supplies.

A business that has sprung up in New York in recent years is that of boatblack supplies. It owes its origin to the growth of the city, the multiplication of boatblack stands, and the introduction and extensive use of colored shoes. There are now a number of concerns, small but complete establishments, devoted to this business, that supply everything a boatblack requires, and his requirements are great, when they formerly were.

At one place there are kept on hand a variety of shoe blacking or polish for shoes of all kinds and colors, including blackings and polishes for gloves and bottles, and imported blackings as well as domestic, and waxes of blackings and oil. There are also here cans for oil and for water; blacking pans, the small round pans made to hold a larger quantity of blacking than would be contained in a blacking box; brushes of all kinds, including daubers, dust brushes, and blacking brushes, whisk brooms and shoestrings of various kinds and colors.

Some of these establishments send out supply wagons, which regularly make the rounds of their customers at boatblack stands all over the city and supply their wants, whatever they may be, on the spot.

A $75.00 Present For Every Hustler

The army of Herald newsboys who have for years shouted their favorite paper on the street, are to be rewarded by the management.

The live newsboy is the success of a newspaper and the Herald appreciates that its faithful corps of newsboys have done much toward bringing it to the front rank as a local paper and in order to show a proper appreciation of their efforts will present all the hustlers with a new $75.00 1899 bicycle. The winners will be decided on June 25th.

Here is the plan—Every newsboy will be given a check when he purchases his papers showing the number he buys and when all checks are turned into the office on June 26th the two boys having the largest number will be presented with a wheel bearing the name "Herald". They are beauties and can now be seen at the Herald office.

The Herald will also make every boy entering the contest and who comes within half the number of the leader a liberal cash prize.

Newsboys in any of the adjoining towns are eligible to enter the contest.

IN EXCELLENT CONDITION.

The Boston & Maine is Surpassed By No Road in the Country.

Since Lucius Tuttle assumed the presidency of the Boston & Maine railroad system, great attention has been paid to and a large amount of money has been expended annually in making improvements in the roadbed of the different divisions of the system. Thousands of cubic yards of grading have been done, and thousands of tons of new and heavier steel have been laid over the entire system.

While great improvements have been made upon every division of the Boston & Maine system it is not likely that any of the other divisions can show the marked improvement of the Eastern. The work of grading and laying steel on the Eastern division was commenced some three or four years ago and is now practically completed from Boston to Portsmouth.

Work was commenced east of Portsmouth this spring and at the present time is being rushed as fast as possible. From Portsmouth to Boston Supt. Perkins and Roadmaster French, under whose supervision the improvements have been made, have as neat and good a roadbed as any in the country.

Supt. Perkins is a great stickler for neatness, and is a firm believer that "Cleanliness is next to godliness," and the station agents and other employees on the division have learned that the way to earn his approval is to keep things neat and clean. In Roadmaster French Mr. Perkins has an able lieutenant, and a man after his own heart as regards neatness and the condition that the road under his jurisdiction should be kept.

CLEVELAND STRIKE ENDED.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 23.—The strike among the employees of the big consolidated street railroad is in a fair way to be settled at a meeting of the council peace committee tomorrow morning. On Thursday the officers of the company issued an ultimatum that the company was willing to take back all but 100 men, which means that eighty per cent. of the striking employees would be reinstated. In the matter of other grievances the company made no changes. The strikers refused to accept the proposition. To day the peace committee of the city council called a meeting of the strikers, the result of which was that a statement was framed by the strikers, which they said was their ultimatum. They agreed that the company could retain one hundred of its present employees, and they put in a clause providing that hereafter in case of difficulty between the company and employees the latter should have the right to appoint a committee to discuss the grievances. This is not contrary to the stand taken by the company. The strikers ask primarily for the recognition of the union. The peace committee, however, persuaded them that it was to their benefit to submit and they have finally decided to do so. The final decision will be reached at a meeting to be held tomorrow morning.

WALCOTT THE WINNER.

New York, June 23.—Joe Walcott, the colored welterweight boxer, won again from Dan Creedon, the Australian middleweight fighter, after fighting twenty hard rounds before the New Broadway Athletic club tonight. Nine weeks ago at the Lenox Athletic club Walcott knocked out the Australian in less than one-half a round. Walcott was always on the aggressive, and betting was better than two to one on him at all stages. Many wagers were made at even money that Creedon would not last a dozen rounds, but the Australian stood up gamely and took enough punishment to knock out a half-dozen fighters. Creedon was very tired when he returned to his corner after the nineteenth round. In the twentieth Walcott rushed and tried hard to land a decisive blow, but Creedon evaded him cleverly. When the gong ended the bout both men were in Creedon's corner. Referee White decided in favor of Walcott.

A WOMAN LAWYER.

Miss Alice Serber, a Russian by birth, admitted to the bar in New York City. Under our liberal laws American and English, German and Canadian, Scandinavian and Swiss women have become lawyers, and this week the list of nationalities was increased by Miss Alice Serber, a Russian by birth, who was admitted to the bar in New York city.

She is a graduate of the New York University, and announces her determination of studying medicine so as to make a specialty of medico-legal jurisprudence. If she succeeds she will be the first woman in history to enter that very difficult branch of the profession. It is only of late years that it has been possible for women to pursue medico-legal studies. Even after they were allowed to practice medicine it was several years before the doors of the courts were opened to them, and even then the practical difficulties were so many as to prevent any of them from making that departure. Not that there has been any very great discrimination in the matter, because it has been almost as difficult for men. The standards of the professions have been raised so high that a student must have a thorough primary and secondary education before he can enter college, which is well nigh impossible before the age of sixteen. The modern college course is four years; the course in medical schools is now four years, and in the leading law schools is three years. This means eleven years of study, involving large expense and the deferring of the money-winning period to the age of twenty-seven.

A THRILLING EPISODE.

Story of the Famous Expedition Against the Sioux.

When the committee of Porto Ricans met Gen. Guy V. Henry in the palace at San Juan, the members saw that the face of their new Governor bore many scars. There was a bullet hole through each cheek, the bridge of the nose was broken, and the left eye seemed dull and colorless. They knew it was possibly a disfigurement, but to the men who served with Henry in '76 each scar spoke of a thrilling episode in that famous expedition against the Sioux in the Big Horn and Yellowstone country, when the "troopers of the yellow stripes" taught the hostiles a lasting lesson.

In that expedition Col. Guy V. Henry was in charge of the second battalion of the Third Cavalry, which formed part of Gen. Crook's command. One June morning, while the troops were camping for breakfast in a little ravine, the outposts rushed back with the startling announcement that the Sioux were coming in force. There was barely time to sound "Boots and Saddles" when the heights about the valley swarmed with the savages. Within twenty minutes a pitched battle was in progress, the Indians, of whom there were several thousand, coming down from the ridge in a series of desperate charges.

During the height of the combat one portion of the American line under Captain Vroom was pushed out beyond its support, and was being punished severely. The hostiles getting between it and the main body. Col. Henry, seeing the peril threatening his brother officer, sent his command pell-mell to the rescue. Just as they swept upon the Indians with uplifted sabres, a flying bullet struck Col. Henry in the face, tearing through both cheeks, breaking the ridge of the nose and completely severing the left optic nerve.

The force of the wild rush carried him on, but he was seen to sway in the saddle. A trooper near him called out hoarsely:

"Are you struck, sir?"

"On, on!" he gasped. "Charge!"

Then he lurched, and in an instant he was lost to sight in the swirling dust. The loss of their leader caused a temporary panic among the soldiers, but they soon rallied, and after driving off the Indians, they searched for their Colonel. He was found covered with blood, but as they picked him up they saw that life still remained. It was placed upon a blanket in the shade and everything possible was done to aid him. It was then that one of the other officers condescended with him, saying:

"Colonel, this is too bad. It is too bad!"

And it was then that Henry, suffering agonies and barely able to articulate, whispered simply:

The Miner Is Rescued.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 23.—Seventy-six hours entombed in a mine without a drop of water or a morsel of food, and then to be rescued well and strong, and to run half a mile to his home, is the remarkable record of Ignatz Cosmoro, of Plymouth. Cosmoro was made prisoner in the Gaylord colliery on Monday morning, and was rescued yesterday. He was thought to have had his dinner pail with him, but he lost it in escaping the coal slide. From the time of the accident gangs of rescuers had been at work making a narrow passageway through the masses of coal which hemmed Cosmoro in.

Both Died on the Same Day.

Denver, June 23.—Paul Talley, aged twenty-two, and his sister, Julia Talley, aged twenty-four, of Philadelphia, and children of Charles W. Talley, a wealthy Philadelphia lumber dealer, are both dead in this city. They succumbed to consumption within a few hours of each other, and now their father is seriously ill. Mr. Talley sent his children here a month ago in hopes that the climate would benefit them, but it was too late.

Ethelwold Safe in Port.

Philadelphia, June 23.—A dispatch from Nassau, Bahamas Islands, received here at the office of the Quaker City Fruit Company, tells of the arrival of the missing steamer Ethelwold at that port with a broken shaft. All on board were reported well. The steamer left here June 7 for Port Antonio, and was subsequently reported drifting at sea with a broken shaft. This was followed by a report that she had foundered.

Whitcapps Must Hang.

Knoxville, Tenn., June 23.—Gov. McMillin says that the Whitcapps, Pleas Wynne and Cattlett Tipton, convicted of the murder of William Whaley and his wife, must hang at Sevierville on July 3. A respite was granted to these men by ex-Gov. Taylor, as their evidence was needed against a man charged with hiring them to commit the crime.

THE MAN WHO LAUGHS.

A MODERN HERCULES.

A little more than a year ago, the young Hercules, Jeffries, was a mere sparring partner and sub-trainer to James J. Corbett, who was preparing for his fight with "Bob" Fitzsimmons at Carson City, Nev. At that time Jeffries was regarded as a somewhat rumbustious, but good-natured youth, who could take endless punishment, while serving as an experiment station for the once champion Mr. Corbett. He could stand up in front of and, in fact, seemed to enjoy the hardest kind of punching without distress. Gradually it dawned upon Corbett and his other trainers that Jeffries was possessed of a strange gift of ambidexterity, and in a very short time he was performing some unheard of evolutions in the art of delivering blows.

At the most unexpected moments, when the accepted rules of the science of sparring were being employed by both Corbett and Jeffries, the latter would suddenly let fly a right, a left and a right again, and he frequently landed with much force.

When, to all intents and purposes, Jeffries should have been sparring with his left hand forward and his right covering his heart, it was not unusual to find him shifting with great rapidity and entirely reversing his position for some advantage that presented itself. He was frequently rebuked by his friends and associates for this gross violation of accepted rules, but Jeffries, nevertheless, continued to plant his terrible left fist, and then to follow up with his right, punching and jabbing and hammering with it before his opponent knew what was going on.

Jeffries had a frame that tipped the beam at 213 pounds in fighting trim. He faced the champion doggedly, and met the swiftest, hardest drives that came from Corbett's mighty arms with the same smile and good nature that have won for him the title of "The Man Who Laughs."

Jeffries had little or nothing to say to the champion and, in fact, learned but little from him. His daily bouts with Corbett, however, enabled him to try his ambidextrous tricks upon a very clever man. He was, to a certain extent, making experiments with his own peculiar methods, closely studying the effect and advantage of using two arms, both of which were under perfect control.

Through Jeffries' ambidextrous method of attack he is enabled to assume the reversed position, and to throw his terrible left in a vicious swing with as much facility and force as he does his right. Coming as it does from an unexpected quarter, the movement disconcerts his antagonist and Jeffries scores a distinct advantage.

Another peculiarity of Jeffries is his system of quick hammering with his right. He very often strikes four and five blows with the right short arm, all in quick succession, while other prize fighters, save that arm for a final and single smash, depending upon the long range to do great damage and deliver a knockout. But with Jeffries by the time he has put in a few right handers his gifted left is far enough back to come in with frightful velocity and power.

His system of training differs greatly from that in general use. Instead of running ten or twelve miles a day he walks about two miles from his training quarters and then runs back as hard as he can. The rest of his work is done at the bag and in the gymnasium, where he directs his own development.

Jeffries has physical attributes that tend toward making a great fighter. He weighs more than did John L. Sullivan when he was in his prime. His reach is 70 1/2 inches, three inches longer than Fitzsimmons'. He stands five feet one inch in his stocking feet, and is but 25 inches around the waist. The heavy shoulder development necessary to success in a fighter is his in great quantity, and with a 17 1/2-inch neck his head is poised on his shoulders to stay. Jeffries may be a great fighter, and he may not. He is young, ambitious and full of power.

Jeffries is perhaps the youngest heavy-weight boxer of championship caliber in the business, and stands six feet one inch in his stockings. He is a fine looking athlete, weighing about 208 pounds in condition, and was born in Ohio about twenty-six years ago.

TROUBLE ALL THE WAY UP. A MONTANA ICE MINE.

The nurse adjusted the bandage on the patient's head in one of the wards of a big hospital uptown and then she said:

"Now you may tell me how it happened, if you will promise to be very quiet."

"Well, you know Monday was a warm day," he began, "so I went into a store and told the man I wanted to buy a straw hat. He picked up one put it on my head and he says, 'That's the hat you want, just that way.' I said I would like to look at others. He said he had others, but insisted on my taking the one he had put on my head. I asked him if there was anything the matter with that hat and he said no, but it was the one he picked out for me as soon as he saw me come in. 'It's Hobson's choice,' he said. 'Whose?' I says, 'Hobson's' he says. I said I didn't know him. Then he said everybody was saying it. Said it was a fad, or something like that, and if I wanted to be 'strictly in it' I would take the hat and if anybody said anything to me about it I should say it was Hobson's choice, and the drinks would be on the other fellow. So I paid him $1.50 and went away under the new hat."

"When I was going up the steps at Park place station I met an acquaintance who says, 'Where did you get it?' I wanted to be sure he meant the hat, and I says, 'Where did I get what?' 'The shed,' he says. 'That threw me off. I asked him what he meant, and he pointed to the headpiece and says, 'That. You look like a calf under a new shed,' he says. 'That's one of Hobson's,' I says. 'Which is?' he says. 'The hat is,' I says. 'I didn't know Hobson was in the hat business,' he says. 'Which one of them?' I says. Then he laughed and poked me and says, 'Which one are you talking about?' 'Honest,' I says, 'It's Hobson's.' 'If it's Hobson's,' he says, 'you'd better take it back to him and tell him to give you your old one.' 'You don't seem to know about it,' I says, and then I told him about how everybody was talking about Hobson. He looked at me and says, 'You'd better take something for it.'"

"And then I says, 'All right, come on,' and we went into the first place and we stood there quite a while and when we went out I found it had cost me about a dollar, and he hadn't paid anything."

"So I left him and came on uptown, thinking all the way up. Two men were on the seat in front of me. I couldn't hear all they said, but one of them remarked as his station was called that he s'posed it was Hobson's choice."

"Then I looked at my hat to see if it was all right. It seemed as if it was too small, but I put it back and went on to Forty-second street, where I got off and went into a lunch place. I met another acquaintance. Pretty soon he says, 'That was a brave thing for Hobson to do.' I said yes. 'You heard about it?' he says. 'Yes,' I says, and it has cost me $2.50, and you will please sell your good bricks to somebody else,' I says. 'Don't take me for a fool all the time,' I says. 'You must be crazy,' he says. 'I got no gold brick,' he says. 'I'm talking about the brave man who sunk his ship in the harbor.' 'What's his name?' I says. 'Hobson,' he says. Then I got up and took my hat from the peg and showed it to him and I says, 'Do you see the hat?' He said 'Yes.' 'Well,' I says, 'that's Hobson's.' He looked at it and says, 'Why don't you wear your own hat? What are you doing,' he says, 'wearing Hobson's hat? And then I hit him. And when I came to I was here.'"

Dreamed Wide Awake.

The earnestness with which some children narrate the things which make impressions on them leads them at times to make laughable mistakes. A little girl downtown was telling her father about a dream. The child was in a high pitch of excitement and the father said:

"Annie, I guess you were asleep when you dreamed that."

"No, I wasn't," she exclaimed. "I was wide awake."

PAY UP OR GO HUNGRY.

An India Method of Debt Collectors to Collect Bad Debts.

The most persistent creditors and bad-debt collectors in the world are said to be those of India. It is not uncommon for them to literally lie upon the doorstep of a debtor for days at a time. It is the custom for the debtor to sit at the door of his victim's tent and allow no one to go out except by his sanction. During this siege he neither eats nor allows his debtor to eat. This starvation is kept up until either the debt is paid or the creditor gives up the siege, in which case the debt is considered cancelled.

The laws by which this common practice is regulated are well defined. Not even the chief governors of the country are exempt from it. When the debt is large or the case in some other way important, it is the custom for a number of collectors to surround the tent and sometimes even the bed of the debtor to make sure he takes no food. The law, however, requires, as a matter of fact, that the collector should not eat during the siege, so the strongest stomach wins. This rule, in spite of its absurdity, is paralleled by our own law, which allows starving a jury into a verdict. In some cases the collectors are systematically put through a course of training to enable them to go for a long time without food.

NATURE ACTS THE PART OF ICE MAN IN LITTLE WOLF MOUNTAINS.

Contrary to the Usual Order of Things in This Mountain Well the Thaw Comes in Winter and the Freezing Comes in Summer.

Seven miles to the north and a little to the east of the Cheyenne Indian agency in Custer County, Mont., is a well filled with ice that excites much curiosity among the ranchers and cattlemen of that section. Every one who visits the well has much to tell and invariably advances his own explanation. Many ingenious theories are given which tend to indicate that mankind of all degrees of scientific knowledge put forth an effort to find the origin of things; however, they all agree that the ice forms in the well during the summer and that it actually thaws during the winter. This apparent contradiction of the natural laws that govern the outside world has carried the fame of the well for miles around and people have traveled great distances to witness the formation of icebergs during the hot weather of July.

Several years ago three men prospecting for silver, mistaking the colors in the rocks, began sinking a shaft; at fifteen feet the cold had increased so rapidly that they were thoroughly frightened. They could feel currents of cold air rushing up from the crevices in the rock; they imagined they were digging into some mysterious underground cavern; they had heard just enough of wonderful adventures of digging into caves and underground lakes, and being alone in this wilderness where the very stillness permitted the ears to hear and the mind to imagine all manner of ghoulish powers hid beneath the rock, so thoroughly filled them with the fear of impending danger that they abandoned the work which has since gained such renown.

In comparatively recent geological times vast beds of lignite coal were formed over the eastern half of Montana, extending into western Dakota. The burning of these beds of coal was the beginning of the bad land formation. The fine debris of the coal, as the coal was burned as brick are burned in a kiln and formed the scoria. Where the heat was greater and rock and sand were present it melted and mixed with the coal and coal ash, forming large, clinker-like rocks, which are sometimes mistaken for lava. As the coal burned out from beneath the clay, now baked into scoria and melted into clinkers, it broke into small divisions and fell promiscuously down into the pits thus formed. Volcanic ash is found scattered over the Little Wolf Mountains and the eastern portion of Montana. It must have drifted with the wind from powerful eruptions in the Rocky Mountains, as there are no indications of any volcanic action in the vicinity of the ice well.

If ice were to be put into the well during the winter it would keep throughout the summer nearly as well as if stored away in ordinary ice-houses. By chance nature has formed almost the identical conditions that man has in his effort to preserve ice throughout the hot weather. The shaft is the cavity in which to store the ice; the volcanic ash, filling into the open space between the loosely piled rock, serves the purpose of sawdust in keeping out the warm draughts of air.

During the winter the well is nearly filled with snow; enough water from the early spring rains finds its way through between the rocks to mix with the snow and freeze into one solid mass of ice. The ice in the well is formed by the cold of the winter season, but does not begin to form sometimes till the winter is half gone. In turn, it is melted by the heat of the summer, but does not begin to melt until the summer is half over. In the early part of the summer it is still freezing in the well and during the first half of the winter it is still melting.

The well acts as a refrigerator. It receives the heat slowly and then gives it off just as slowly. If the earth received and gave off heat readily the hottest weather would be in June, and the coldest in December. For the seasons follow nearly a month behind the sun. The conditions surrounding the ice well cause it to follow the seasons from six to eight weeks later. Those visiting the well during the first half of the winter find water, and those visiting during the early summer find still freezing, even falling small icicles forming as the water comes down above drips over the rocks on the sides down near the ice.

It is a fact that if on a hot day you walk rapidly into the cave to where the ice is, it feels as though a strong current of cold air were blowing against your face. The sensation is so decidedly real that it requires careful demonstration to prove to the contrary, and even then it almost seems as though the demonstration has been a mistake. It can be easily tested by using smoke, or better still, a rather heavy colored glass. Again, if one should stand without the entrance to the cave on a very warm day, near enough to feel any draught that may be stirring, none can be felt coming from the cave. If one should stand directly above the ice well on a hot, still day, even putting the face down to the very opening into the well, no upward draught of cool air can be felt; but go down into the well, and one would state positively that there was an upward draught of extremely cold air.

One of the oldest tribes that once inhabited southern California was the Tanche. To-day the remnants of the thousands they once could raise are a miserable five, who squat, tolerated, but not invited, upon the land their forefathers had owned. Yet these five would possess a distinction if their case were only known, for the oldest is the oldest woman in the world, and the youngest is almost a marvel of longevity.

The grandmother is now 145 years of age, her oldest child is 120, and her grandchild, the youngest of the quintet, is 98. Their united ages are considerably over 600, a record equalled by no one family on record. The old grandmother, whose courtesy denotes a life of living, is sleeping on her second century. She wakens only to take nourishment. Her hair is as white as carded wool, and her flesh has wasted away, from inactivity, until nothing but the skin and bone remain.

FOLLOWING CUSTOM

Old Habits of Man and Beast Which Neither Seems Inclined to Discard.

Why does a man wear two buttons on the back of his coat? This is not a companion riddle to "Joe" Miller's celebrated conundrum, "Why does a hen cross the street?" But it is a pertinent interrogatory. Habit—that's the answer. Unquestioning, unreasoning custom. Your father wore two buttons in that same position. So did his father. So did your father's ancestors. So do you. Adam said: "There wasn't much call for sartorial splendor in the Adam period and Eve wasn't the author of the 'name labels' to make a man's theory. About the time men began wearing clothes and developing differences of opinion in which the sword was the usual arbitrator the two buttons came to be in evidence. They held the sword belt in place. When the coffee and pistol had superseded the rage for rapiers the custom of wearing the two buttons was continued. Ever since then the buttons have been worn. No use to anyone. No advantage except to the button manufacturers. Yet your tailor and mine had better not leave those buttons off, or we'll start an account at another tailor's."

Look at the hairdresser's shop. This isn't for baldheaded men or infants. There's a pole that looks like a stationary pousse cafe, or half a hundred rainbow colored serpents all climbing up and down in several directions, as coming to your condition. In the good old days when the giants were on the earth there were also barber surgeons seeking whom they might entice. The vari-colored pole was the sign of their profession. We don't have barber surgeons now. The surgeon lives in a fashionable quarter, and if you planted one of those poles on the corner of your street, you'd have your barber locked up. The pole means "Blood letting done here." Come to think of it, the pole is not so inappropriate after all. But if I were a barber I would not advertise my specialty that way.

When you write a business letter why do you write the name of the person who is to receive it at the top? Haven't you written the address and name on the envelope? When the world was younger the scribes and pharisees were not acquainted with envelopes and consequently knew nothing of the mysteries of the "envelope game" as it flourishes to-day. The address was written on the letter, and the letter was then folded in such a way as to bring the super-scription only to view when the sealing wax was applied.

The window custom is one which almost every builder knows by heart. These gentlemen are in the habit of putting up houses with windows on all sides, and this is all right where the wind is from the north or south. But your ordinary builder doesn't confine himself to the utilitarian. When he strikes a corner house where there are not so many windows required as in other localities, he does the best he can to give that house the appearance of being nothing but windows. Look at all the corner houses you pass. Most of them have "blind" windows. No ventilation windows are placed on the side walls, with lintels, ledges and sills and the builder feels he has done his duty.

Ever notice your dog walk round and round in a circle before he lies down? Yes, of course. Why does he do that? Know of any reason why he should go through that "unvarying" form? No. Well, that dog's forefathers and the forefathers of all the dogs, big and little, started that practice. They had to beat out a hole in the snow or grass before they could get a comfortable bed. Then, too, your dog sits with his nose on his paws. You don't know why. Neither does your dog. But he's sitting following instinct. His forefathers went away back in the dim dog ages had to keep their noses clean for the scent and they never let them touch the dust or snow.

There's the cat. Clean beast, the cat. Always washing herself. That's because cleanliness runs in the cat family. The first cat had to be a mighty immaculate feline, physically, or her prey would have scented her and kitty would have gone hungry. And so it goes throughout. The man and the brute beasts are on an equality in the matter of following blind custom.

Sulphur Flies

An extraordinary insect is described by a correspondent of the Scientific American under the above title. The name was coined by the employees of the Mountain Copper Company, Limited, because of the remarkable habits of the fly. The company, whose furnaces are about six miles west of Redding, Col., mine and roast between ten and twelve hundred tons of ore a day. Iron and copper sulphides are the main constituents of the ore, and the sulphur is forced to part from the metals by means of heat. To accomplish this the ore is brought from the mines and piled in great heaps upon sufficient wood to kindle it. The huge heaps—approximately two hundred feet long, fourteen feet wide and six feet high—burn for about thirty days.

When the roasting process is well under way clouds of sulphurous fumes rise from the heaps, rendering respiration impossible in their immediate vicinity. Then may be seen, darting in and out of the suffocating vapors, peculiar gray flies, about the size of a house fly, that apparently live and breed in the smoking ore. They seem to thrive in the densest fumes, the lower portion of the heaps fairly swarming with them. At night the workmen are compelled to cover their faces with netting and their hands with gloves, to resist their attacks, for they are very poisonous. The flies were unknown until the smelting operations began, some years ago.

Summarizing the habits of insects, Dr. L. O. Howard finds that the injurious kinds include those of 112 families that feed upon cultivated and useful plants, and of one family that is parasitic on warm-blooded animals. Among the beneficial kinds, he places those of seventy-nine families that prey on other insects, thirty-two families that act as scavengers, two families that are useful only as pollinizers, and three families that supply food for fishes. There are twenty-two families that contain both injurious and beneficial forms, and forty-nine families of undetermined status.

UNTOLD.

Beautiful she looked in the drawing-room of the Howard mansion, in the town of Deepdale, in the eastern part of Suffolk. She might have made a fit subject for a Madonna, only that there was too much pride, and too little meekness, in the contour of her face.

He who stands by her side, and looks at her so lovingly, is Guy Wilford, who loves her so passionately, but who also loves her in vain; for he is the son of a poor gentleman, while she is the daughter and heiress of the wealthiest man in Deepdale.

Guy had come to see old Mr. Howard on some matters pertaining to his profession (that of a lawyer), and had been ushered into the drawing-room to await his appearance. There on the couch lay Helen Howard—asleep. Guy stood looking at her when Mr. Howard entered the room. He must have read the love-light in Guy's eyes, for he crossed over to him and said, in a kind voice:

"Wilford, you love my daughter? Ah, I know you do. Well, my boy, you have my permission to woo her; though whether you win her or not, she will decide."

And he smiled pleasantly upon perceiving the joyous look on Guy's face, as he caught his hands, thanking him, and declaring his love for his daughter.

They left the room quietly, Helen sleeping on, all unconscious of what had transpired.

"Helen, do you love me? Will you be my wife?"

Guy Wilford leaned toward her as he spoke, reaching out his hands, but she put them back coldly, saying:

"Mr. Wilford, if I had anticipated a declaration of love, I should have excused myself from seeing you this afternoon. I have always regarded you as a friend, but never supposed you would aspire to Helen Howard's love or money."

"Helen—Miss Howard—you wrong me!" cried Guy. "I have naught but the purest love for you. I am sorry that I have so displeased you by my presumption, but I could remain in uncertainty no longer; since you look so unfavorably to my suit, I bid you farewell."

And he was gone. She wished then she could take back the harsh words she had spoken upon hearing of his departure for India, where he would remain for five years or more.

Helen was more brilliant than ever that season; notwithstanding which, she was always possessed with a dissatisfied feeling. So, at last, she begged her father to take her abroad, which he did.

Three years passed before they returned to Deepdale, and yet Helen Howard was Helen Howard still. Old friends again flocked around her, and she threatened to become as much of a belle as of old.

Rosa Carrington came to stay with her—a bright young lady of eighteen. One evening a large party had congregated on the lawn of the Howard mansion, when Miss Rosa exclaimed:

"News—news! who can guess? Brother Harry tells a good piece of news. The one who guesses shall have the right to the first introduction."

Then there were cries of "Who? who? We can never guess—let us know," etc., before Rosa would condescend to satisfied their curiosity.

"Well, you all remember Guy Wilford, who flourished in this town about five years ago, and who left very suddenly for India? It is no less a person than he come back, wealthy, polished, traveled—the handsomest man in the world, my brother says, with the form of an Apollo, the pride of Lucifer, the wealth of Croesus, the—Helen, are you ill? What is the matter?" she cried, as she happened to glance where Helen stood, and saw her reeling and trying to support herself by the column.

Guy Wilford was immediately forgotten; all attention now turned to Helen. She soon recovered, and retired to her room.

"Why should I be so disturbed because Guy Wilford has come? I don't love him. Pshaw! I'm foolish."

She was now possessed with a longing to see Guy. She heard no more of him until about two weeks after that first announcement, when Rosa received intelligence that Guy Wilford would accompany her brother to the ball which was to be given by one of the leading families in the town. She determined to be present.

Upon entering the ball-room Helen saw Guy Wilford. Five years since last she saw him! Ah, me! how things had changed!

She had no chance to speak to him till the latter part of the evening, when Rosa Carrington brought him to her and introduced them, thinking they had never met.

She was glad that he hurried her off to dance, for she felt almost faint now that she was at last with him again. They separated after the dance, Helen retiring into a deep day window.

He soon returned and requested her to accompany him to the conservatory, to view a large cactus they had been discussing.

While there, almost before he knew it, he had her in his arms, telling her how he loved her, and asking her again to become his wife. After five long years she had found contentment. Rosa Carrington often visits Mrs. Wilford, and declares that she never saw such a case of "love at first sight." Helen never told her what happened five years ago.

HE PLAYED CARDS.

McGill Sat Into A Little Pitch Game Thursday

AND IS SORRY NOW.

It Was Only Ten Cents An Ante, But—

Elisha T. Cotton was arraigned before Associate Justice Adams this forenoon at ten o'clock on two charges, gambling and keeping a gambling place. Frank McGill of Nashua was the complainant. The respondent was represented by Judge Page, while Lawyer Kelley was McGill's counsel.

McGill came here from Nashua a number of days ago to buy a saloon. He registered at the Langdon house, Mr. Cotton's hotel. McGill testified that he got into a pitch game at the Langdon last Thursday with Landlord Cotton and a fellow named Harry Clifton. When they sat down to play in the office after dinner, McGill had two hundred and eight dollars. Most of it was in two rolls of bills. Anyway, that was what he had that morning, and he says he didn't spend but a few cents in the forenoon.

The game was for ten cents a "set up" and the lowest man out paid for the drinks. The drink that came at the end of every game finally knocked McGill out. He doesn't know how long they played, but thinks it must have been several hours. He can't remember leaving the table, but the bar-tender at the Langdon says he took McGill up to bed.

When McGill got the dope out of his head Friday morning and counted his money, the two rolls of bills had shrunk worse than Bryan's presidential boom. He could find only fifty-four dollars in long green and a little silver, in his clothes.

McGill went up to the police station and let Marshal Entwistle count it over. The marshal couldn't get a dollar more out of it. McGill had lost one hundred and forty-four dollars.

Mr. Cotton pleaded not guilty to both charges, in police court. McGill was the only witness called. Clifton, who has been selling bitters on the parade lately by the pale light of a benzine torch, set and picked his teeth, and tried to look cool.

Judge Page moved that the complaint dealing with keeping a gambling place be quashed, on the grounds that it was not explicit enough. The warrant charged the respondent with permitting Clifton to play cards in his (Cotton's) house, and Judge Page contended that it did not cover the statute.

Judge Page also asked for his client's discharge on the other complaint which read gambling with Harry Clifton claiming that Clifton himself had not testified and that McGill's testimony had dealt entirely with himself, not implicating Clifton.

Judge Page and Lawyer Kelly had a lively tiff over this. Judge Adams stopped it by adjourning court to five o'clock this afternoon, so that he could have time for considering the disputed points. Messrs. Cotton and Clifton were released on their own recognizance.

McGill claims that, in a three hundred game of ten cent pitch like that which proved his undoing, it would take a man from now till the October crickets chirp to lose as much as he did. Consequently he marvels at the dexterity with which his antes made such a big puncture in his wad.

Judge Adams was not quite up on the ins and outs of pitch and it had to be explained to him that it is customary to settle after every game, not at the conclusion of the tournament. There was a small but greatly interested group of spectators.

McGill came originally from Vermont. His home is located nowhere in particular, and he was looking for a good business investment in Portsmouth, intending to settle down here. He made a frank witness in court.

Often have visitors to Portsmouth complained of losing money in some unaccountable manner, but seldom has a more comfortable roll disappeared than the one McGill would like to find.

HE WENT, JUST THE SAME.

William B. Bunker, the veteran Epiphany Knight Templar who was burned out in the heavy electrical storm, did not allow his misfortune to depress him. He went with DeWitt Clinton commandery to Portland, as he had planned, and his geniality was noticeable all day. Mr. Bunker was warmly greeted by his comrades. He stayed at the Rockingham Friday night and returned to Epiphany this morning.

CITY BRIEFS.

Now the days begin to shorten. The season at the Shoals opens today. Independence day is only ten days off.

The navy yard force will be paid today. The graduations are over until another year.

The long summer vacation has commenced. Pay day for the employees of the navy yard today.

All Portsmouth is proud of its graduating class. The police are to give some of the dealers a surprise.

Now the sweet girls are "graduated," what will they do next? Lear still serves delicious Ice Cream at the Yacht Club Store.

"Blow hot, blow cold," describes New Hampshire summers. Amateur photographers are more numerous than ever this year.

Portsmouth will be well represented at the Dover races next week. Work is progressing rapidly on the Rye extension of the electric road.

Nothing better after a hearty meal than one of Dowd's Honest Ten cent cigars. Railroad Commissioners Putney, Bellows and Sanborn will meet in this city on July 6.

Quite a number from this city will attend the outing of the Amoskeag veterans at the Weirs. The "S. G." Londres is made of the choicest stock and is the best ten cent cigar in the market.

Isn't it too bad that the whole world can't take a nine weeks' vacation with the school children. A great race meet is booked for Granite State park, Dover, next week. The meet opens on Tuesday.

If pleasant tomorrow many local bicyclists will make long runs to neighboring cities and towns. Governor Rollins will speak at the post prandial exercises of Dartmouth's commencement dinner, June 28.

The Rev. William Warren of Trinity Methodist church exchange, tomorrow with the Rev. William Woods of Exeter. Have your shoes repaired by John W. Mott, 34 Congress street. Satisfaction guaranteed. Hand sewed work a specialty.

The Unitarian society of Massachusetts, to the number of two hundred and fifty, will arrive at the Shoals on July 8th. Don't forget to examine the Spalding chainless bicycle. It is the best mechanically and easiest running chainless built. Try it.

The National Guard soldiers have "come marching home again." They have had a week of very endurable weather for their annual training.

Mrs. J. M. McFarlane of the Appleton street mission in Lawrence, Mass., will address the meeting in the People's church at 7.30 Sunday evening. The members of the class of '99, Dover High school, will have an excursion to the Isles of Shoals next Monday. They will be accompanied by the members of the other classes.

A delegation of ladies from Storer Relief Corps attended a district meeting and school of instruction at Dover on Friday and were the guests of Sawyer Relief Corps of that city. It is a fine thing to take a little of the Old Port Wine the Globe Grocery Co. sell at a quarter of a dollar a quart bottle and put it in a little cold water. It strengthens one "exceedingly this hot weather."

Solomon Littlefield, who received a bad fall from a staging on Elwyn road on Friday was reported, as being quite comfortable this morning. Mr. Littlefield had a narrow escape from instant death.

The man who succeeds in finding "David Harum" or any of the other late fiction at the city library is, nowadays, must feel as he would if a long lost uncle died in California without issue and with an estate valued at six million. Along with the other Congressional notables, Senator Chandler was "shot" by a kodak artist in Washington for an article in the latest Metropolitan magazine. The senator foiled the effect, however, by raising his handkerchief to his face.

Just as "one swallow does not make summer," the coming of June does not always bring hot weather and make the ice man happy. The promise of the latter part of May, this year, has not panned out very heavily and Manchester has had one of the coolest June's in recent years.

DeWitt Clinton Commandery of Knights Templar returned from its pilgrimage to Portland at 8.30 on Friday evening and made a short parade about town to the splendid music of Lurvey's Cadet band of Lynn, before going to their asyllum. The Sir Knights report a splendid time.

HIGH SCHOOL RECEPTION.

A Charming Close to Commencement Day.

The reception of the graduating class was held Friday evening at Philbrick hall and it was no disparagement of those of former classes to say that it was one of the prettiest ever held. In fact it was one of the prettiest parties ever held in this city, the size of the class and the handsome decorations of the hall, both contributing to this splendid effect.

Potted plants, palms, ferns and cut flowers were used in profusion in the decorations and the orchestra was fairly hidden from view by a bank of flowers in the front of the stage.

Conservatory orchestra of ten pieces furnished music for dancing, and began the festivities of the evening with an excellent concert, the programme of which was much enjoyed by its auditors.

During the concert the class officers, assisted by Principal Brown and Miss Mathes, received the guests as they arrived. The following were the ushers: Horace Rowe, Bauris Bradford, William Griffin, Harry Peyser, Harold Bennett, Reginald Jewett, Arthur Farrington, Eugene Sewall and Daniel Penhallow.

Shortly after nine o'clock the signal was given for the grand march which was led by Roland Hoyt and Miss Laura Adelaide Matthews. They were followed by nearly a hundred couples, although a great many more joined in the dances after the circle.

Most of the dancers were young men and maidens and the loveliness of the latter evoked many an admiring compliment from the strangers who were present in large numbers.

The costumes of the ladies were very beautiful and merited a more detailed mention than could be made with the time and space at our disposal, but it suffices to say that no more charming gowns could well be imagined than were worn by the young ladies on this occasion.

The order of dances was a very dainty affair, of the folder design, with P. H. S. embossed in gold letters on the covers. There were twenty-three numbers on the programme.

Roland Hoyt officiated as floor director during the dances and he had as aids the gentlemen of the graduating class.

Notes of the Evening.

The galleries remained crowded until after midnight. Reich catered at intermission in his usual excellent manner.

J. Byron Shannon came down from Nashua to play in the orchestra.

The young ladies looked fine and many words of admiration were bestowed on them.

There were many out of town guests present and they thoroughly enjoyed the evening, it looks counted.

The music was fine and on some of the dances the musicians were forced to respond to three or four encores.

Not a hitch occurred during the evening which detracted in any way from the interest or enjoyment.

GENERAL MANAGER LEARY SURPRISED.

Thomas Leary, the well known manager of the Portsmouth Brewing company, is seldom caught unawares by his friends, in fact, he is one of the greatest jokers and entertainers in the city and his friends have planned for some time to even up with him.

Last evening a party of twenty paid a visit to his country residence on the Lafayette road and there they found the genial "Tom" proudly surveying his farm and he gave them a hearty greeting. Mrs. Leary had been let in on the secret and she had provided one of the finest spreads ever served to a gathering in this city.

After the party had made themselves comfortable, George E. Pollard, the well known clerk of the Portsmouth Brewing company, stepped forward and in a neat speech presented Mr. Leary, in behalf of a few of his friends, with an elegant sideboard. An evening of solid pleasure followed and Mr. Leary kept the gathering in almost constant laughter over his fund of interesting stories. It was midnight when the young men returned to their homes.

THE FIRST CAR.

Work at the car barn of the electric road at the Creek was pushed all last night and workmen will be busy all tomorrow in getting one of the cars in readiness to go over the route on Monday. This car will be sent around the city to see that the tracks and wires are all right and in good working order.

Motorman Twombly, who will go on the rolls as motorman No. 1, has reported for duty and will pilot the first car. A large gang of Italians are at work today freeing the rails from dirt and sticking up the road bed. Watch out for the first car!
